

DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI

Each year the College of Veterinary Medicine names three of its graduates as Wilford S. Bailey distinguished alumni in honor of their contributions to animal welfare, the profession, and their communities. Recipients are honored in May during the college's commencement ceremony.

Call for Nominations – Wilford S. Bailey Distinguished Alumnus/Alumna Award

Dr. Wilford S. Bailey, a veterinary parasitologist, held a continuous 50-year faculty appointment at Auburn University after receiving his veterinary degree in 1942. He served in positions ranging from instructor to university president.

The Alumni Advisory Council Awards Committee is seeking nominations for the 2015 Wilford S. Bailey Distinguished Alumni Awards.

The committee meets in April during the College of Veterinary Medicine's Annual Conference to review nominations and to select deserving recipients in recognition of their outstanding achievements to the veterinary profession. The recipients are honored each year during the college's commencement ceremony.

Nominees

There are three areas of eligibility for the alumni awards:

- (1) Academia
- (2) Private Practice
- (3) Other (private industry and government, public health, state veterinarians)

The candidate must be a living graduate of Auburn's College of Veterinary Medicine. This includes not only those who obtained professional degrees, but also those who received advanced degrees.

Each nominee should be known for his or her accomplishments in veterinary medicine and/or should have made an outstanding contribution to his or her community and the advancement of human welfare.

Documentation is an important aspect of the nomination process. To nominate alumnus graduate for this award, submit the following information to:
